Sherokee Ilse

Do you wish you knew more about how to help families who experience baby loss in the ED, L&D, postpartum, clinics, etc (miscarriage, stillbirth, NICU, or compromised pregnancy?)

Why and how does a Birth-Parenting Plan help parents gain calm, control and personal power even during miscarriage?

1. Describe the Five Perinatal Loss Principles for Patient-Centered Care
2. List methods to slow down the “rushed” process when a baby dies and when caring for the patient and family
3. Explain the power of the Birth-Parenting Vision/Plan as it impacts families and care providers
4. Describe how to meet the needs and feelings of families who first learn their baby has died
5. Strategize and list specific ways that communication and continuity of care can enhance the families’ experience throughout the entire system/journey
6. Distinguish and explain the difference between caring strategies of protector and empowering care, rescuer vs helper, and the realistic role of the care provider
7. Identify how caregivers can show respect for the parents and their parenting roles
8. List the positives of the CuddleCot™ and how it should be presented to families, how it is used, along with dos and don’ts of policy-making
9. List 3-5 newer ideas for making memories, creating mementos and ceremonies that can be offered to families and explain why they are vital to long-term healing
10. List topics to be shared with parents that are examples of fully informing families and explain why sharing the ‘why’ behind decision-making is an effective strategy

TMC employees cost is $75

"Sherokee, It was a prolific training filled with illuminating conversations, storytelling and practical suggestions. As a veteran in the field of infant death, your pearls of wisdom support and accessibility are greatly appreciated. Your warm and giving spirit has touched the lives of many. Thank you for all that you do!" From Yolanda, Social Worker

"I am a well-trained 25+ year OB nurse and perinatal loss coordinator. This was the best and most practical training I have ever attended!!!" PA

"I liked the teaching style, videos, scenarios, modeling used, ways to say different things- all were helpful in starting conversations with parents."RN Overlook Hosp NJ

"I see now what a better job we can do for our parents. Slowing things down, informing them more fully, and treating them as the parents where they do the parenting tasks, not nurses, makes so much sense." Jo RN

Parent Advocate, bereaved mother, author, Int'l Speaker, President Babies Remembered and Baby Loss Family Advisors™ and co-founder Baby Loss Doulas®.

She has conducted over 2,000 workshops, seminars, support groups, and other trainings in the US and internationally; Ilse has had 3 babies who died and is the author of 18 books/booklets on loss.
